Product improvements

GP locomotive controllers now have a new function, the ability to set which end of the locomotive is forward. This allows you to plug the control box into a second control plug at the cab end and when forward is selected the locomotive will travel away from the engineer. When operating two locomotives as a multiple unit (MU), the locomotives can operate prototype fashion, tail to tail. As an option F unit style locos can incorporate this new function along with the controls necessary for the F unit to operate as a trailing unit.

Air system now has 100% duty cycle compressor .

Lift rings are now lost wax castings.

Added snow plows and new versions of 48" roof top fan housings along with more roof top horns.

Added details

Also to improve the details on the front and rear of your locomotive, we now include brake lines with angle cocks and glad hands. As an option, MU signal hoses with elbows, hose, glad hands, and mounting bracket are available.

New locomotive

Due to customer demand we have another F unit in production. It is the FP7 model which is 4 prototype feet longer than the regular F unit. Our version is 6 3/8" longer than standard and the kit is $200 more than regular F kit. Here is a photo of this locomotive operating MU with our company demo locomotive. Both locomotives are being operated from the same control box with complete control of 8 notches of power, regenerative braking, sound systems, ETC.

Ready to run equipment

We have found it necessary to remove RTR equipment from our catalog as stock items,. This move is necessary due to a reduction in our personnel and the decision that complete RTR locomotive sales do not warrant training new employees. We will custom build locomotives by special order though at this time delivery for RTR equipment will be extended and will be done only upon special order. We still have raw kits, machined kits with milling and lathe work complete and semi-finished kits, which are machined kits partially assembled.
